The neoliberal society we inhabit has built a way of organizing life in common, politics, economy, culture, education, etc., that develops in opposition to the material bases that allow sustaining life. It is necessary to confront this capital-life conflict from the approach of Feminist Economics and care, and apply it not only as part of our narratives but also in our day to day practices.

This webinar is an invitation to think radically, to question ourselves and to share our ideas on how to face the coming crises. A modest contribution on how to continue challenging the system from collective intelligence.
